Alumni Legislators Demonstrate Concern

Not one, not two, but five alumni of Ohio University currently serve in the Ohio Legislature, and on April 17th four of them got together with the Franklin County Alumni Club to demonstrate their continued interest in Ohio University and higher education generally.

Claire "Buzz" Ball, '63, MA '64, is from Athens and maintains a close association with the University. He serves on the Ways and Means Committee, the Education Committee, and the Transportation Committee as its secretary.

Don J. Pease, '53, MA '54, is a leading legislative expert on education and has recently published articles on state support for higher education in both The Chronicle of Higher Education and The Ohio University Alumnus Magazine. He has served in the Ohio Senate and is currently a member of the Ohio House of Representatives where he serves as chairman of the House Education Committee and is a member of the Ways and Means Committee.

Paul R. Leonard, '65, has worked in both public relations and labor relations. He was assistant Prosecuting Attorney for Montgomery County and has represented the county government in the area of health, recreation and taxes as well as prosecuting felony cases in Montgomery County.

Oakley C. Collins, '35, has served 18 years in the Ohio State Senate and is currently in the Ohio House. A former school administrator, he is a member of the Ohio Education Association. His son, Oakley Collins, Jr., is also a graduate of Ohio University.

State support of higher education was the main concern of State Rep. Donald J. Pease in his address.

Vernal G. Riffe, Jr., Speaker Pro Tem of the Ohio House of Representatives attended Ohio University but was not able to be present for this meeting of the Franklin County Alumni Chapter.

A large portion of the evening was given over to an informal social gathering. Slides of University scenes, past and present, were shown. The four legislators along with Martin Hecht, vice president for University relations, and J. David Scott, director of alumni affairs, talked with alumni and answered questions about the future of the University and about the aspects of state funding for higher education.

During the actual alumni meeting, the impressive new film on Ohio University was shown, and each of the legislators spoke briefly about his own role in the political aspects of university funding.

To top off the evening "Buzz" Ball conducted a midnight guided tour of the Statehouse for members of the Alumni staff and several students from the University who had traveled to Columbus for the meeting.

State Rep. Claire "Buzz" Ball points out the names of committee members on the State House roster to student Mike Bates.

"SID" BECKERT DONATES ACCOUNTING LIBRARY

Ralph "Sid" Beckert has once again gained the gratitude of Ohio University and the students and alumni of the University by donating his personal collection of accounting books and data to the Special Collections division of Alden Library.

In addition to an extensive library of published material, the Beckert collection includes all of Beckert's office files and the manuscripts and research material which are the basis for his own published works.

"Sid" graduated from Ohio University in 1923 and returned to teach in the Accounting Department in 1927. Over the years, he has taught almost everything in the curriculum of the Accounting Department and served as Chairman of that department from 1956 to 1962.

His empathy with students and his tireless efforts to serve Ohio University have gained "Sid" the title "Mr. Alumni," and in 1968 he was honored by the Alumni Association with the "Alumni of the Year" award. In his devotion to the success and future of Ohio University Beckert has visited students and alumni in each of Ohio's 88 counties and has only recently been forced for reasons of health to stop traveling throughout the country to appear at alumni club meetings.

To honor "Sid" at the time of his retirement in 1969, an honor fund called "Books for Sid" was established. Contributions to this fund are used for library acquisitions in the field of accounting. Donations for this fund may be sent to the Ohio University Fund, Inc.; Box 869; Athens, Ohio 45701.

Alumni, friends and former students who wish to correspond with "Sid" may write him at the Piqua Manor Nursing Home; 1840 West High Street; Piqua, Ohio 45356.

Communicators honor distinguished alumni

Communication 5, the title of the 1973 edition of Communication Week at Ohio University, marked "five years of bringing the nation's communication leaders to Ohio University."

The activities scheduled for the week of May 7-11 included addresses by such notables as Dr. Frank Stanton, C.B.S.; Bill Mauldin, Pulitzer Prize winning author and cartoonist; Otis Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times, and Shana Alexander, Newsweek columnist.

Every aspect of communication was represented from the professions in journalism and broadcasting, through telecommunications, organizational and interpersonal communications, as well as therapy and research.

One of the highlights of the week was the presentation of Distinguished Alumni Awards from the School of Journalism to Deena Mirow and Bruce Humphrey.

Miss Mirow received her bachelor of science in journalism with honors in 1968. After graduation, she joined the Cleveland Plain Dealer as a general assignment reporter. In 1970 she was named education editor of the P.D., a position she now holds.

While at Ohio University, Miss Mirow served as an associate editor of The Post and as president of Theta Sigma Phi, women's Journalism society.

Bruce Humphrey received his bachelor's degree in fine arts from Ohio University in 1956. After graduating, he worked at the Newark (Ohio) Advocate as photo editor. He returned to Ohio University to earn his master's in journalism in 1968. Humphrey then became managing editor of the Advocate, which has won numerous awards for layout and design in the past three years.

UNIVERSITY PROFESSORS

Ten Ohio University professors were chosen in February as "University Professors," an honor bestowed on them by the students who voted for their best professors. These professors are given the privilege to institute their own special programs or classes into the curriculum of their departments. Each University Professor receives a $1000 honorarium to use as he wishes in his program or class.

The professors chosen were Dr. Robert Hobbs, Professor of Theater; Dr. Michael Sincoff, Professor of Interpersonal Communications; Dr. Maung Gyi, Assistant Professor of Interpersonal Communications; Dr. Dwight Pugh, Assistant Professor of Business Administration; Hari Shankar, Associate Professor of Mathematics; Dr. Frederick Hagerman, Associate Professor of Zoology; Ronald Isle, instructor of Speech and Hearing; Manuel Serna-Maytorena, Associate Professor of Modern Languages; James Tilling, instructor of Government; and Robert Baker, Professor of Journalism (Advertising).

WORKSHOPS

During the summer months Ohio University is host to a number of special educational and recreational programs. While most of the programs are designed for groups with a specific interest, many of them are open to the public. Some may be of interest to alumni and their children, especially sports-minded boys.

In addition to designing and conducting the programs, the university makes its facilities available to high school bands for their summer camps and to civic, fraternal, and religious organizations for their annual conventions.

For further information on the programs, facilities and services available during the summer, write to the Office of Workshops, Conferences and Institutes, 301 Tupper Hall, Ohio University, Athens, Ohio 45701 or call (614) 594-4907.

COMMENCEMENT

Ohio University's annual Commencement Exercise will be held June 9, 1973 at 1:15 p.m. in the Convocation Center, Athens.

President Claude R. Sowle will be the Presiding Officer. As of yet, the main speaker has not been chosen and it has not been determined if any honorary degrees will be conferred, according to Richard Stevens, director of public occasions and coordinator of the exercises.

Wallace J. Hodes, president of the Ohio University Alumni Association, will give an address, along with Mark Anderson, president of the senior class, and Roy Knappe, president of the Graduate Student Council. Dr. Clyde C. Pinnell of the Methodist Church of Athens has been asked to deliver the invocation and the benediction for the ceremony.

The 110 Marching Men of Ohio, conducted by Dr. Thomas Lee, will perform a medley of songs chosen by the senior class, based on tunes popular during the past four years. "Alma Mater, Ohio" will be sung by Kenneth S. Clark.

FORENSICS

Ohio University's student forensics team received the first place 1973 Cumulative National Sweepstakes Award at the National Forensic Association's tournament held April 27-29 in Ypsilanti, Michigan.

The first place award recognized Ohio University as the school placing highest in total earned points in competition over the past three years. The total points, 522 and the highest total ever won by a single school, outdistanced the second place award given for 463 points.

For the single year competition of 1973, Ohio University received second place for total points earned. Over 70 universities competed in the national tournament held at Eastern Michigan University.

Dr. Raymond Beaty, Ohio University's director of forensics and newly elected executive secretary of the National Forensics Association, presented original copies of the April 1973 concurrent resolution of the Michigan State House and Senate recognizing intercollegiate forensics to seniors of the Ohio University squad and to Athens alumni of the forensics program, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen F. Sachs of Athens.

SENIOR CITIZENS

As of September, 1973 Ohio University may be welcoming a totally new group of freshmen to campus. As a public service to Senior Citizens, the University will begin this fall to offer course attendance privileges to anyone over 62 years of age for a special one time processing fee of $5.00.

After paying the $5.00 fee, a Senior Citizen may make arrangements with an instructor to sit in on any classes which are not radically overcrowded or which do not require prohibitively expensive resource material. No instructional or special course fees will be charged.

There is no limit on the number of courses which may be taken, but academic credit toward graduation is not available for courses taken under this program.

An office to direct the Senior Citizens program is being established within the Extension Division of the University. Curtis Johnson, Director of the Extension Division, is currently seeking a retired University faculty member or administrator to direct the program on a voluntary basis.

THEN AND NOW

1973

O.U.'S OLDEST LIVING ALUMNUS

"Steak was 10 cents a pound — three pounds for a quarter" when Charles E. Westervelt graduated from Ohio University. Of course, that was back in 1893 when tuition was $17 per quarter and attendance was taken every morning before classes.

Cutler Hall was the only campus building and the War Memorial was just being built.

"There were 18 in my graduating class," Mr. Westervelt said. "That was the largest class graduated at that time."

Things have changed a lot since those days, and Mr. Westervelt has watched them all. He marked his 101st birthday last Oct. 24. Though he is no longer able to see, he exudes all the wit and wisdom traditionally attributed to the elderly.

"I was only four months old when we left for Franklinton," he recalled. Mr. Westervelt was a well travelled youth before he came to Ohio University. One of five sons of a Methodist minister, he was born in Clintonville in 1871. The family moved and grew through five towns before reaching Athens. While in Zanesville, Mr. Westervelt's father talked on the telephone for the first time.

"The man was 14 miles away," Mr. Westervelt recalled. He has seen the advent of electricity, airplanes (his favorite) and "even the bicycle." There were only seven professors at O.U. then. Mr. Westervelt was taught by Dr. Gordy, and remembers Dr. Super as "a very fine Latin and Greek teacher." When asked what changes he would recommend for Ohio University, Mr. Westervelt said, "They should behave themselves down there."

MISS MARGARET WESTERVELT

"We had very loose rules," he said. "Just 'behave yourself,' and of course chapel attendance was required daily."

After practicing law for 75 years, he now resides with his daughter, Margaret on 80 acres in Westerville, a suburb of Columbus.

"Great-grandfather Matthew gave the land for Otterbein College and the Methodist Church," Miss Westervelt said, which is why the town of Westerville is named for their family. She breeds and shows Wyndel Collies.

"Dad has always been a strong Republican," she said. "He wouldn't miss the convention on TV. A lot of times I'll read him a story in the paper and he'll say 'I heard that on the radio.'"

In spite of passing years and rapid changes, Ohio University's oldest alumnus keeps the spirit of youth.

University budget status remains unclear

Although the University administration and the Board of Trustees have approved a $43,127,000 budget for 1973-74, the exact financial status of the University for the next academic year will be unclear for some time. The lack of precise financial information is based upon two considerations; first, the amount of state support to be received is still undecided and second, the exact fall 1973 enrollment is unknown.

Two major proposals for funding higher education in Ohio have been delivered to the General Assembly since the end of March. A resolution from the Inter-University Council IUC, requested an overall 6.5 percent increase, and a revised proposal by Governor John J. Gilligan provided an increase of 5 percent.

President Claude R. Sowle, a member of IUC — composed of the president and one board member of each of the state assisted universities — has campaigned both with legislators and taxpayers for the 6.5 percent increase. The figure is cited by the IUC as the minimal increase needed to allow the state universities to operate on a "continuation budget" basis.

Although the IUC would permit a 3 percent increase in student fees if necessary to reach the 6.5 percent level, President Sowle has personally urged that state funding be increased sufficiently to avoid a fee raise. He has referred repeatedly in his campaigning to two facts: Ohio ranks 47th among the 50 states in per capita support of higher education, and Ohio students in the state-assisted universities pay fees which are the fifth highest in the nation.

In April Governor Gilligan announced a revised proposal for higher education funding for the 1973-75 biennium which would raise the state's level of assistance from 3 to 5 percent. First interpreted as being a 5 percent increase in subsidy support only, coupled with a freeze on student fees, a subsequent Board of Regents' interpretation of the proposal indicated the 5 percent increase was on the entire "expenditure model," or the total cost of educating students.

At Ohio University, the governor's proposed 5 percent annual increase will generate an approximate increase in state funds of $1 million for 1973-74 and $2.2 million in 1974-75. The million dollar disparity between the two years is a consequence of the special allowance provided the University for this year over the actual entitlement earned for enrollment. The extra funding was permitted by the Board of Regents to offset losses in fee income caused by the unexpected drop in enrollment.

President Sowle has indicated that while he is encouraged by the governor's revised funding proposal for higher education, he still does not feel the governor has gone far enough. He will persist in his efforts, in accordance with the IUC resolution, to get the legislature to increase overall funding to the 6.5 percent level and to provide separate funding for any civil service cost increases mandated by the legislature.

The need for the continued drive for the 6.5 percent level is evident when exact figures are considered. Under the governor's revised proposal for state funding, and assuming enrollment and, therefore, fee income at essentially the same level as that of the current year, Ohio University will be an estimated $400,000 short of funds for its 1973-74 budget.

The enrollment assumption is a tenuous one. Total state enrollment figures for 1973-74 have been revised downward several times by the regents and the governor. Freshman application figures, down 18 percent at Ohio University, are down as much as 35 percent at some other universities. Many officials are hopeful that applications are merely being made at a later date this year since competition in obtaining college admission is less.

A strenuous recruitment and retention effort was initiated by Ohio University last fall. University officials are hopeful the major results of the campaign will show in Ohio University's enrollment totals for September, 1973. Alumni interested in assisting with this recruitment campaign should contact J. David Scott, Director of Alumni Affairs; Box 869; Athens, Ohio 45701.

ALUMNI GREEK TOUR

The tall, dark stranger in the back of this happy crowd is none other than David Scott, director of alumni affairs. In this instance, he's directing a particularly successful alumni affair—the Alumni Greek Tour, last March 18 thru the 25th.

WE'RE NOT GETTING OLDER

WE'RE GETTING BETTER

You don't know what—or who—you're missing if you don't plan to attend Reunion 1973 at Ohio University, June 15, 16 and 17.

All your old friends will start to gather Friday morning, and the activity will start immediately. You'll be free to renew old acquaintances or make use of the university's extensive recreation facilities until 2 p.m. Then a tour bus will take you around the campus for a look at the old and the new of Ohio University. The bus will return you to the South Green in time for a quiet rest or visit with old friends.

The evening's activities will begin with a reception and wine tasting party, followed by a buffet dinner—a steamship round of beef and all you can eat. Multi-media presentations, including slides and old films will be served with the dessert.

President and Mrs. Claude R. Sowle, faculty and administrators will meet with you from 10 to 11 a.m., followed by the Alumni Day Luncheon. The Golden Anniversary class of 1923 will be the Guests of Honor, and special recognition will be paid to all reunion classes—those ending in a “3” or an “8.”

That evening, everyone will get together for a T-bone steak fry on the patio, with draft beer, music and dancing. Ohio University films from the 1920's and '30's will cap the nostalgic spirit of the weekend.

The Alumni Association has made special arrangements so that the cost of your accommodations and the activities have been combined into one package price—$26 per adult and $22 per child. For your convenience, group babysitting will be available for children over the age of five.

You can't afford not to be there!

I'm interested in returning to Ohio University for the Reunion of the Class of _____.

RECRUITMENT EFFORT NEEDS SPIRITED ALUMNI

JERRY REESE

J. David Scott, director of alumni affairs, has already received letters and calls from several alumni who are interested in joining the continuing recruitment effort. In order to coordinate their activities, Scott and admissions director, Jerry Reese have designed a program which will update their information about the University, as well as acquaint them with the skills and materials used to make recruitment as effective as possible.

Interested alumni will meet with Scott and Reese and other University personnel on the weekend of June 15, 16, and 17 in conjunction with Alumni Weekend activities. From there, they will return to their home cities to spread the word about Ohio University.

The Office of Alumni Affairs is anxious to hear from those alumni who want to work for the future of Ohio University. Anyone wanting to find out more about the Alumni Recruitment Program or make suggestions for effective recruitment efforts should contact J. David Scott at the Alumni Development Office, P.O. Drawer 869, Athens, Ohio 45701.

Several special weekend activities, such as the Ohio History Contest and Engineering Weekend, have brought hundreds of high school students to the main campus to give them a taste of college life.

Newsletters keep students and parents up-to-date on academic and financial developments, while distribution of the Barron's brochure provides them with a nationally acknowledged evaluation of Ohio University.

However, Ohio University needs the services of those who know her best. Alumni are being sought to spark interest among those students in their area who may be future Ohio University alumni.

Enthusiastic, informed alumni are one of Ohio University's greatest potential resources in the all-out effort to actively seek and retain prospective Ohio University students.

All departments and offices of the university have contributed time and ingenuity to improving the enrollment picture, and the chances for success look good.

The "I Love Ohio U" bumper stickers have spread the university's name, as well as the Bobcat, all across the country. The College Green tabloid, which was sent to all high school guidance counselors and potential students, gave a unique "students' eye view" of the advantages of Ohio University.

SPORTS Round-up

by Frank Morgan

Five new faces have appeared in starting roles after two weeks of spring football practice.

Jeff Pisching, Maple Heights Benedictine, is the lone change on offense, moving into the center spot.

Defensive changes include Toledo Scott sophomore Bob Willis playing middle guard; Toledo Scott junior Tim Harrison, tackle; Cleveland Collinwood sophomore Wally Sonnie, end, and Youngstown Boardman junior Tim Storm moving into roving linebacker. Co-captain Greg Lieb, Cleveland St. Joe senior, shifted to wide side halfback.

"Overall, I've been quite pleased to this point," said head coach Bill Hess.

"Our replacements for graduated players seem to be working out adequately and we hope they will keep on improving. Bill Gary, considering he's missed two years of football, is doing an outstanding job for us."

Fullback L. C. Lyons, quarterback Rich Bevy and tackle Jeff Beams are also "having good springs," according to Bill. "Defensively we just need to become more aggressive."

"AT UCLA ON FRIDAY, Southern California Saturday and the Pacific Ocean on Sunday," as Jim Snyder is fond of putting it.

That's right. It's Ohio's basketball team at Pauley Pavilion against national champion UCLA Dec. 21, meeting Southern Cal the following night, then home to welcome Ohio State.

"To my knowledge, it's the first time an Ohio University athletic team will play in California," said Snyder, who will be in his 25th year of basketball coaching at his alma mater.

It's the most challenging, attractive basketball schedule ever put together at Ohio University.

Bring Back the MAC

by Paul Hagen

After winning four consecutive Mid-American Conference baseball championships, Ohio University's Bobcats were forced to settle for second place last year.

After Kermit Blosser and his team won their 16th league links title in 21 years two seasons ago, the 'Cats fell to third last season. The tennis team finished a disappointing fifth in the conference match. The track team finished fourth.

Spring sports '73 Ohio University style is dedicated to bringing MAC championships back to Ohio. And so far, the teams seem to be getting off on the right foot.

Former Bobcat baseball and football star Jerry France has stepped into the big shoes left by Bob Wren and molded a powerful group with a team batting average over the magic .300 mark.

Bob Bruno, All-MAC choice in left field last year, is now at third base and hovering around the .400 mark. Seven other 'Cats have excellent averages and may finish over .300.

With eight seniors and 13 returning lettermen, the baseball 'Cats are striving to bring back the MAC, but with the league tussle in its third week, all teams that had played at least two games had two losses.

"We have a tremendously balanced league," France said. "If everyone gets their games in, a team could win the title with as many as six or seven losses."

The golfers got off to a fast start, taking a 4-1 dual meet record and two straight tournament victories into the Bob Kepler Invitational meet in Columbus, which features some of the top teams in the Midwest.

Ohio track coach Meade Burnett said, "We're young and inexperienced, but we should get better as the year goes on." The shuttle-hurdle relay team of Eugene Miller, Mike Noel, Malcolm Williams and Bruce Greene has already set a new school record, while two freshman pole vaulters have also cleared the old standard.

At the tennis courts, George Klein is encouraged by the results of the team's spring trip. "By comparative scores we would seem to be improving," he noted.

As the saying goes, "Bring back the MAC."

GOLF'S NOT JUST A HOBBY TO ALUMNUS FLOCKENZIER

Although he doesn't make a living at it, golf is more than a game to Dick Flockenzier. O.U. '50 . . . it's a way of life.

Dick was a member of Kermit Blosser's team while at Ohio University.

DICK FLOCKENZIER

To this day, he puts up the entire golf squad when they travel to the Ashland Ohio Invitational—which they've won four out of five years.

"The friends I've made through golf have helped both my personal and business life," Dick said. "It's a great get away—very relaxing. I take out my frustrations by beating on that ball."

Dick has had his serious golf moments, such as winning the state amateur championship of Ohio in 1965. He has been involved with golf since his days as a caddy. Dick credits Coach Blosser with contributing much to his education at Ohio University.

"You really don't learn to appreciate Kermit and what he's done for you and meant to you until you're out of school a few years. You find out that many of the things he taught you were right on the button," Dick explained. "Humility, dedication and the fact that the sun doesn't shine every day."

A business administration graduate, Dick struck out on his own after working as an accountant and a company treasurer.

Right now, two of Dick's sons are enrolled at the University. Rick, 21, and

At the moment Dick is promoting a golf exhibition for area Boy Scouts which will feature an appearance by pros Arnold Palmer and Dave Marr.

MYERS NEW REDS ADMINISTRATOR

Ohio University graduate Dick Myers has joined the staff of the Washington Redskins, assuming the duties of administrative assistant. The announcement was made on Sunday, Feb. 18, by George Allen, the team's head coach and general manager.

"Although Dick is young, he is very knowledgeable in league personnel and policy, and we are happy to have him with the Redskins," Allen said.

While at Ohio, Myers worked as a student intern with the Cleveland Browns for a summer in the public relations office. He worked briefly with the New York bureau of UPI before going to the National Football League office where he has been in charge of player personnel.

A STUDY IN CONCENTRATION, OHIO-STYLE

This collegiate bandsman at Ohio University is so intent on blowing his own saxophone that he obviously is oblivious to his hat down around his ears. Ohio, claiming "the most exciting band in the land," logged 34 television minutes last fall appearing at two pro football games. They're 100 strong with esprit de corps that any team would be proud to have.
